Re: Prominent Downriver Attorney Lectures on Natural Law and American Education

Ann Arbor, MI November 6, 2003 - Attorney Kerry L. Morgan ,of counsel to Pentiuk, Couvreur & Kobiljak spoke at Ave Maria School of Law. The subject of the engagement centered around parents' rights to educate their children without the interference of the state or federal government. Mr. Morgan spoke on applying legal and natural law principles that were identified by Thomas Jefferson in an attempt to separate church and state. The philosophical discussion as it related to modern education issues and current laws was well received.

Mr. Morgan is the author of several articles on natural law and unalienable rights as well as the book, "Real Choice, Real Freedom in American Education". Currently, he is completing a legal review of religious liberty principles and U.S. Supreme Court cases. A Detroit College of Law graduate, Mr. Morgan also holds a masters of arts degree from Regent University and he is an honors graduate from Michigan State University.

Formerly an attorney-advisor with the U.S. Commission of Civil Rights in Washington, D.C., Mr. Morgan now practices law with Pentiuk, Couvreur & Kobiljak. His chief areas of practice are education policy, municipal law, employment discrimination, and environmental law. Located in Wyandotte, Michigan, the general practice law firm represents municipalities, housing cooperatives, credit unions, condominium associations, businesses and various non-profit organizations.
